

Lagondaforum: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by allstair at Aug 07, 2010 12:02 pm

just search for lagonda wings. auction ends Sunday 8 August.

I assume these are LG rather than V12.

if anyone is interested, I would like the wheel discs but not the wings so willing to share cost - vendor will not split the lot.

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by h14 at Aug 07, 2010 6:23 pm

Yes, they're not V12...possibly LG6 but more likely LG45.

And I've got a spare set of wings...so perhaps they're not the rarest set of spare wings on the planet after all!

Surely not expensive at that price, hope they find a good home...like a Le Mans replica being reverted.

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by Colin M34 at Aug 07, 2010 10:40 pm

Folks,

I agree, I think they are LG45 wings, which are very widely available than V12 ones, given the number of Le Mans replicas now in existence.

M34

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by peter weir at Aug 08, 2010 12:08 am

I had a look at my early(1935) LG45 DHC wings and whilst the shape looked similar, they didn't have what appears to be a vertical flange with large hole on the inside of the front wings towards the front as shown on the e bay pictures.

On mine the mounting flange follows the curve of the front dumb irons right to the front.

Could they be early LG6 with the hole in the vertical flange for the bumper mountings?

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by DavidLG45 at Aug 08, 2010 10:49 am

Can't see how they are LG45. Surely they are LG6? The vertical step in the flange that sits on the chassis rail is where the horns go (pic 2). The back of the spare wheel cover (pic4) - LG45s have a tapering box shape piece here to encase the "pylon" that holds the spare wheel clamp on one side and the jack pump on the other side.

No bids (Sunday am) maybe a bit of bargaining possible?

David

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by Roger Cain at Aug 28, 2010 9:54 pm

Gentlemen, the wings are now in the Isle of Man and will hopefully serve as a winter project as I bring them back to pristine condition. I normally restore complete cars (of a lesser marque) as a weekend hobby but the wings took my fancy..story of my life! I would be interested in correctly identifying them though.. LG45 or LG6?

Lagondaforum: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by DavidLG45 at Aug 29, 2010 8:11 am

Hi Roger,

Can't see how they are LG45. LG6 is my opinion. Post some more pix, perhaps?

David

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by Roger Cain at Aug 29, 2010 6:16 pm

Hi David, thanks for the contact.

I'll be soda blasting them in the coming weeks in preparation to panel beat and remove the dents, so I'll take some more pics then.

Cheers

Roger

Re: Lagonda wings for sale on ebay until sunday 8 August 2010

Written by Roger Cain at Sep 02, 2010 10:45 pm

At some point, I'll be also be looking to replace all the tools in the empty tool box, can anyone please help me in indentifying the specific items that were in the original and possibly where these are sourced?

Toolkit

Written by alistair at Sep 03, 2010 4:55 pm

Roger

here are photos of tools in mine - the leather holder is original but I think that the tools are not.

I bought other tools suitable for Lagonda from <http://www.baconsdozen.co.uk/tools/spanners.htm>

This is V12 and I don't know whether LG had same layout and same toolkit.

photos are too big for the forum so will send direct

Alistair
