

Lagondaforum: DB 3L engine and trans

Re: DB 3L engine and trans

Written by xkcrazy at Oct 22, 2014 3:08 am

As far as known history for #24, The previous owner was a street rod builder that watched for "interesting" cars to convert. He acquired the car in 1992 and stored in a warehouse for a future project. IN 2007 I had a Chev Nomad that he wanted and worked out a trade. I have had some luck in obtaining some missing trim from online sources. Regarding trim, my car has the chrome strip at the door handle extending forward on the front fenders. I don't see that on other cars pictured. Also, what is the bonnet chrome ornament/mascot representing?

Re: DB 3L engine and trans

Written by SRD at Oct 22, 2014 9:55 am

Please can you post some pictures of your car on the forum, so we can see how it looks today.

Thank you

Simon

Re: DB 3L engine and trans

Written by xkcrazy at Oct 23, 2014 2:08 am

I had posted three pictures on the post war Lagonda site. I will try to find them for posting here. The car is inside an 8X20 car hauler now, so difficult to get a good picture. I am contracting a TIG welder to make some body repairs, so I will be moving the car in the near future and more pictures will be made.
